NATURE’S HAND - DENTIST’S TOUCH BIOMIMETIC REMINERALIZATION OF DENTIN

The word “Biomimetic” means to copy nature, as nature has always been our ideal model to imitate. The key issues in the mineralization and regeneration of a dentine microstructure are replicating the hierarchical structure of the demineralised dentine collagen fibrils and inducing intrafibrillar mineralization. Biomimetic remineralization is an organic, matrix particle-mediated, non-classical crystallization pathway, a methodology that imitates the natural process of mineralization, represents a different approach to this problem by attempting to backfill the demineralized dentine collagen with liquid-like ACP nano-precursor particles. This bottom-up remineralization strategy does not rely on seed crystallites and may be a feasible method for remineralization.
